Better leaders can lead to better outcomes.

In today's competitive construction marketplace, contractors need an effective safety and health program to help minimize loss, lower costs, reduce employee turnover and improve operational efficiencies. And a well-trained supervisor can be the vital component in that program's success.

To meet regulatory requirements, most contractors provide supervisory training on a regular basis. However, proactive contractors who are striving to reach exemplary status will also provide non-field related training, such as motivating employees, effective planning techniques and leadership skills.

We're committed to helping your business improve safety and reduce losses. That's why we created our Supervisory E-learning modules, designed to help contractors reach exemplary status and improve outcomes.

What to expect:

Supervisors will learn ways to:

- Manage, implement and enforce a safety and health program – consistently and fairly – across all job sites and work crews
- Involve and motivate construction employees
- Plan for complex construction operations
- Recognize the financial impact that the safety and health program plays in the company's overall success
- Understand their roles and responsibilities
