

Helping you reduce injuries to keep your workforce and your bottom line healthy.

When safety comes first, savings follow.

Minimizing incidents can help build your business's success. According to the latest statistics, preventing a single injury saves an average of $40,000.¹

For decades, we've been working with contractors of all sizes, identifying key safety risks common to construction and developing solutions to help avoid these risks. Our Digital Construction Safety Package, your new one-stop shop for expert-developed safety tools and solutions, is now available on-demand through our Risk Engineering Library.

What's in the digital construction safety package?

Our resources can help contractors of all sizes prevent common and costly construction injuries on a worksite such as falls, struck-by and caught-between incidents, excavation-related injuries and motor vehicle accidents.

On-demand e-Learning

Construction foreman training: A basic foreman training program that provides entry-level foremen with vital skills to help improve project safety.

Construction supervisory series: A six-session series for construction supervisors to learn how to:

- Develop and implement a safety and health program
- Motivate employees to engage with the program
- Enhance the program's positive financial impact
- Plan for complex construction operations
- Perform their roles and responsibilities effectively
- Improve their leadership skills

Defensive driving series: A series of nine short and targeted sessions to help drivers prevent collisions, mitigate hazards, and ultimately become better drivers.
